

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON.
MONDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1891.

CROSBY & NOYES, Editors.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation in Washington three times larger than that of any other paper in the city. As a local news paper and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

The report of the Commissioner of Charities, full extracts from which will be found elsewhere in today's paper, is of special interest, and it is the first report made by the new official entrusted with the task of supervising and systematizing the local charities, and will command general attention, as well for the interest and recommendations it contains as for the importance of the subject. It is not to be expected, of course, that everybody will endorse Mr. Warner's conclusions on all points. Many persons, however, who have given the matter careful consideration have long held to the opinion that the number of charitable institutions here is excessive, and that the work they undertake could be performed more effectively and at the same time with less expense if efforts to that end were consolidated. At the same time that some charitable work has been doubly provided for, no provision whatever has been made for other equally necessary branches of the government, and a supervisory head to the local system of charities has been annually a sort of go-as-you-please contest before Congress in which representatives of different organizations took part, each naturally desirous of securing for his institution as large a share of public favor and money as possible. With proper supervision, as has been pointed out by THE STAR, the claims of all the local charities could receive intelligent consideration, the amounts appropriated adjusted properly, new branches of charitable work, now lacking, could be added and fostered, and the waste due to the duplication of charities of similar character avoided.

Mr. Warner does not attach due weight to the considerations which give charitable institutions in this city a just claim upon the government. Notwithstanding Mr. Warner's view that the conditions existing here are not materially different from those of other cities, it still remains a fact that a large part of the dependent population was brought here during and following the war as a result of various causes, which give charitable institutions in this city a just claim upon the government. Notwithstanding Mr. Warner's view that the conditions existing here are not materially different from those of other cities, it still remains a fact that a large part of the dependent population was brought here during and following the war as a result of various causes, which give charitable institutions in this city a just claim upon the government.

So everything is fresh, new and of the latest creation. This class of goods is not inappropriately termed artistic, for it is most carefully and artistically shaped, and the outlines of ornamentation everywhere show the traces of genius, while the details of sewing and embroidery are executed with the most painstaking care. The materials used are French Percales and Nansooks of various grades of fineness, which for comfort and durability equal anything of the sort in the world. The prices will doubtless surprise you. THE FINISHING TOUCHES.

AT THE PALAIS ROYAL.

FROM THE PALAIS ROYAL.

A costume is only begun until it is trimmed. So many fall fashions are "under way" now that a TRIMMING is a necessity. There are so many novelties that may be used with propriety that it is a little puzzling to make a choice. But with all our variety we have confined ourselves to the novelties that find most favor in the eyes of fashion. Everybody who keeps TRIMMING says the same thing. It is all a matter of taste. Our judgment ought to impress you as being superior. We have certainly demonstrated the character of our artistic conception in the magnificent line of Dress Goods we have opened this season in this department. The result of our achievement in that department. The result of our achievement in that department. The result of our achievement in that department.
